Rep. Phil Cavanagh, from the 10th District, offered the following invocation:

“We gather here today intent on doing good work.

To make decisions for our communities.

We seek to represent fairly and universally, those who have given us this task.

May we use only our best skills and judgment as we consider the merits and pitfalls of each matter that is placed before us and always act in accordance with what is best for our communities and our fellow citizens, especially those still struggling from the Great Recession.

May our efforts be blessed with insight, guided by understanding and wisdom as we seek to serve with respect for all. May our personal faiths give us strength to act honestly and genuinely in all matters before us and grant us the:

- Wisdom to govern amid the conflicting interests and issues before us and
- The ability to work together in harmony and even when there honest disagreement for the welfare and true needs of our fellow citizens.

As trusted servants, we seek blessings on our deliberations, and on our efforts here today.

Amen.”

The Speaker Pro Tempore assumed the Chair.

Comments and Recommendations

Rep. Stamas moved that the following remarks be printed in the Journal.
The motion prevailed.

Rep. Abed:

“As a newcomer to state politics, coming on board as a state representative was like stepping into another world ... many a time, I shook my head not believing some of the dynamics and methods used to get something passed or how things are run....some good, some not so good.

But the ability to be in a place where you can fight for policies that you believe in and represent the people of your district has been such an honor. It’s a job I have taken very seriously and put my heart and soul into.

As a newly elected representative, I began my term taking part in a bipartisan weekend, ‘Under the Dome’, an unofficial orientation for new legislators with frank discussions on what we would face. I’ll never forget one of those frank discussions when I raised my hand and asked one of the Republican leaders, ‘What are the chances of a Democrat passing a bill and what advice would you have?’ He asked what district I was from and whose seat I took. When he realized I represented a district that had previously been Republican for 50 years, he responded: ‘Oh you’re not going to pass “bleep”.’ I loved the blunt honesty.

It was that same weekend I first met Floor leader Stamas and let him know that his reputation was one of fairness and I appreciated that and looked forward to working with him. I’ve never been disappointed.

As a ‘marginal’ which I’m so lovingly called....I often heard ‘Theresa could you give that bill to someone else so it has a chance of passing?’ Or, when trying to get co-sponsorship or a bill to be taken up, I’d hear: ‘You know we are not supposed to do anything to help you get something passed’. But I never let roadblocks stop me so I found other ways to get things done..... I gave my bills or ideas to other people, worked with others to get bills passed, or continued to advocate one on one with people from both sides of the aisle.

One of my proudest moments was stopping the forester bill from passing on the floor. I was asked multiple times why I cared so much about foresters.....my response, which is the same for every bill that comes before me, was.... ‘I care because it is important to a group of people no matter how large or small.’

But I do want to give a special shout out to people who worked with me and put aside other differences including my ‘marginalness’ to fight together for the issue we shared a passion for:

1. Rep. McMillin: Rep. McMillin was the first one to say he would work with me on getting an amendment to a bill in Regulatory Reform. At first I was cautious and thought this might be a trick but I soon learned he was sincere and party lines made no difference.....

I can’t say enough about what a pleasure it was to work with him on Common Core and on our shared concerns about federal mandates on standardized testing. Party lines vanished as we researched, questioned, and fought against what we believed would be detrimental to our children. I took part in the Common Core sub-committee he put together to delve deep into this issue.

I’ll never forget when we were both fighting the final passage of Common Core on the House Floor and heard we would not be allowed to speak so together we took the podium on both sides of the aisle with our hands raised asking to speak in opposition. Neither of us were called on but together we made a point.

2. Rep. McBroom....another friend. We both came to the capitol adamant about addressing the need for our trades programs in High School and knowing the Merit Curriculum was actually taking away this choice. Rep McBroom and I became strong allies in ensuring trades became a viable option in our schools and both worked hard on each side of the aisle to get support. It was a thrill to be at the bill signing to see this come to fruition. Thanks Rep. McBroom for the teamwork and including me every step of the way.
3. Loved working on Reg. Reform...it was the most bipartisan committee I have sat on and mutual respect was always shown. Great leaders in Rep. Crawford and Rep. Haugh.
4. Of course Rep. Wayne Schmidt who welcomed me with open arms as I walked up to the Hayford House for the first time for the bipartisan barbecues.....Still waiting for the Hayford Shirt.
5. And my Karaoke buddies: Rep. Haines and Rep. Kowall.....And I admire Rep. Haines tenacity to stand up for No Fault even though it is not a popular thing to do in her party.
6. Getting co-sponsorships on my bills was a little difficult to do on the opposite side of the aisle due to the 'x' on my back....but the biggest compliment I received was when I went to get my first signature, one of my Republican colleagues was quizzing me on the bill and seemed apprehensive at first but then he looked at me and said, 'I trust you and know you would not lead me astray on what this bill is about' and then signed it....that meant so much.
7. So many people to thank on the Democratic side from leadership to policy staff. The knowledge, expertise and dedication I have seen and experienced from so many have been greatly appreciated.
I have to start out by giving a huge thank you to my dear friend, colleague and seatmate...Rep. Schor. He has been an amazing support system.... patiently answers all questions, and is ready to help me on a moment's notice. Everyone here who has worked with me knows I ask a lot of questions and Andy has always answered each one. His guidance has been much appreciated. He helped me know the ropes and how to navigate the system. And we don't always agree on things...some big things even on each other's bills but that has never hampered our friendship and respect.
8. To my two 'Yooper' colleagues who keep me laughing and always in suspense as to how they would vote ...there has been an ongoing joke that Republicans look to them to see how to vote on a bill.....
9. To Rashida who I admired before I even took office for her passion, sincerity, and drive to fight for what is right and just.
10. To my dear friend Ellen Cogen Lipton, her wisdom, her knowledge, her passion for our public school system and doing what is best for children. She will be a huge loss on the committee and at the State Capitol.
11. Rep. Kosowski who agreed to be my dance partner for the Board of Water and Light charity fundraiser...and we won first place for our Staying Alive routine!
12. And of course my staff...Kathryn-I'm so glad you joined our team just two months ago. I look forward to watching your journey at the Capitol. I know you will do well. And Brandon....a huge thank you for your loyalty, dedication and hard work. Brandon was always available and ready to help whenever it was needed and has such a warm and pleasant personality. Everyone who meets him loves him. He has been with me through two campaigns and this term. Thank you Brandon.
13. And to all my Democratic colleagues...I'm so lucky to be part of an amazing caucus who truly care about the people they represent and will fight for what they believe in. Each brings unique talents and perspectives with them...And I can't say enough about the strengths, wisdom and knowledge the women in our caucus brought to the table. I was so fortunate to have worked with them.

One of the reasons I ran for this office was to stop the dismantling of our schools which I saw first-hand while working in education and I will continue that advocacy even after I leave. I have spent my life helping children to reach their full potential in our schools and taking away obstacles and I cannot stand by and watch legislation put into place that will be detrimental. It goes against my very core. So although the means for advocacy has taken a detour, my commitment to our kids, our seniors, our families and veterans continues. So until next timeGod bless.”

Comments and Recommendations

Rep. Segal:

“It has been an honor to join the 3rd Termers Club. We all don’t make it this far and it has been an honor. Except, I think we missed out on an opportunity. Just think if we really did collect a dollar for every time someone asked ‘What are you doing next?’ we might have been able to fix the road funding issue by now.

I feel sorry for those serving next term—it seems that having new ergonomically designed chairs directly correlates to much longer session times. But, as my fellow term limiters have discussed, these later night sessions do make it much easier to say ‘good-bye’.

It has been an honor to represent both the old and the new 62nd District. The home of Kelloggs, the 110 Air Wing, the Federal Center, Albion College, Albion’s Kids Museum and so much more. I thank my community for being able to serve for all 6 years. And I do have to say, in my six years in the House and my six years in the County Commission, I do have to say, I have not been bitten by a dog—not once.

When I was first elected to this Chamber, my daughter’s description of my job was that ‘mommy goes to meetings’. Well, that first term I did have a lot of meetings, but it was worth it to save the Michigan Youth Challenge Academy from closing due to budget cuts. This is a jewel in our state that helps kids that have gotten on the wrong path, get back on the right track. It literally has saved lives. I am proud of my work for MYCA and will be celebrating the graduation of Class 31 this Saturday. It’s a moving ceremony and I invite all of you to attend at least one during your tenure.

As my second term started, my daughter’s description of my job became ‘mommy helps people’. I can’t tell you how proud I was the day she shared that. Thanks to an incredible team, we have helped a man with a young family get the surgery for a new liver, helped Gloria finally get a scooter that actually works giving her back her mobility, and even sitting down with Larry before he passed so he could talk about what more we should be doing to help people die with dignity.

While helping the district is the most rewarding part of the job, I would be remiss if I didn't thank a few people who made the days in Lansing a little more fun:

To Chairman Lund—it has been a pleasure sparring with you in Insurance. I didn't think it would ever be possible to find anything that we would agree on, but we did. All I can say is to the drivers in Macomb and Calhoun counties—watch out.

To Speaker Pro-Tempore Walsh...I still object to your visual impairment and hope this parting gift will help. And please, do pass it on to Rep. Leonard so he doesn't fall victim to the same visual complications that come with that position.

To Majority Floor Leader Stamas—it has truly been a pleasure to work with you and against you. You are the only man I have known that has shown so much interest in my footwear...but then again, I never knew just how much of my basketball skills I retained. It seems I can still check people, even if it is only into their desk.

To Chief Dickson—thank you for literally having my back. I don't want to relive the day I turned around to find a group of State Troopers charging at me on the floor, but thank you for being in between them and me.

While there are many more colleagues to thank and acknowledge, the real work happens behind the scenes by the countless hours put in by staff.'

I have been blessed with a dedicated, passionate and witty staff during my tenure. They have sacrificed so much (let's be real, we don't pay the staff nearly as much as they deserve) to work on behalf of the 62nd District. I have been lucky to call them friends and now they are part of my family. They affectionately call themselves 'Team Segal' and I have been honored to have them working along side me.

To Jon Hansen—your sense of humor and breadth of experience was key to winning my second term. Your advice, even when not asked for, was almost always right and needed. You are still missed at Eggs and Issues.

To Travis Radina—my first hire. His job prior to working for me was video recording opponents. I figured if he could do that job, he could do anything...and I was right. Travis, you were my voice and my champion for five years and I can't thank you enough. I am waiting for the day when 'Team Segal' will become 'Team Radina', but hate to say it, most of the team will never don the maize and blue.

To Gary Garbarino—thank you for making following the rules so much fun.

To Lisa Metcalf—you brought order to my life and made sure I didn't let things slip, well, when I remembered to look at my calendar. And while most people have to deal with car troubles and illness, I will never forget getting calls that you were late because the cows were out...again.

To Ian Mays—you may have joined the team toward the end, but you were still invaluable. MYCA graduates will be able to thank you for years to come and I know you will be happy in your new job when you don't have to schedule for 117 cadets.

To Annalisa Grunwald—you are brilliant and a dear friend. Who knew we could have so much fun discussing the ins and outs of insurance policies? And thank goodness you are now an attorney and we have attorney client privilege!

To Liz Kranz and Jeremy Herliczek (hur la check) —you both have always gone above and beyond. Liz your talent has made a brand of the Segal Red. And Jeremy you have captured my family in some of my favorite shots and your work will hold a place of honor in my home.

And I saved the best for last: my husband, Mike, and my daughter, Elise.

To my best friend and husband, Mike, I can't thank you enough for helping me make my dream come true. He has rearranged his schedule too many times to count because of session, spent more 'date nights' at district events and spent more time patiently waiting for a constituent to finish their story so we could leave the grocery store, restaurant, etc. then I could possible count. It's been an incredible 15 years and we are just warming up. Thank you for all you have done.

Elise was literally born into politics. Just hours after her birth the phones were ringing in Calhoun County because I wouldn't make the County Commission meeting that night and some tried to remove me from Vice-Chair position. But even after years of seeing all the ugly parts of politics—the nasty robo calls, mailers, and the long hours Elise's description of my job now includes the statement that 'Mommy has the job I'm going to have one day'. And she hasn't ruled out going to Washington, D.C. or Governor.

Yes, my time in this chamber is at a close, but if anyone starts messing with the Michigan Youth Challenge Academy—know that I will be back!

Thank you."

Rep. Hooker, having reserved the right to explain his protest against the passage of the bill, made the following statement:
"Mr. Speaker and members of the House:

While I support assurances of Home Heating Credits, this makes at least 25% of the money be spent on weatherizing. Federal programs to weatherize has been around for years and there was examples of fraud and waste in stimulus spending. This also ties up money for home heating that could be used for heating needs. This bill needed to change."

Rep. Olumba:

“Miles Davis All Blues first released in 1959 on one of the greatest jazz albums of all time Kind of Blue. Opens in the middle of a room like a room in a building like the Parthenon where great philosophers reasoned, or maybe in a barbershop on a Saturday morning where the fellas gathered to kick it back and forth, or in a house like in a home, maybe in a living room or a dining room after dinner, or even in a house like this house like the Michigan House of representatives. Miles, Cannonball, and Coltrane on the trumpet, alto sax, tenor sax, help us to understand what discourse and reason is like, but end up giving us a peak at what it means to be a leader. Three leaders come together to discuss an issue of the day, the first one speaks and then the second and the third, all sound very convincing but it is clear that by the time the tenor sax speaks whose argument carries the day to most. Coltrane again. The deepness the volume of the tenor sax is too much to ignore. The piano Wynton Kelly closes everything out with the commentary declaring Coltrane virtues, propaganda. Somehow for someone like me I just knew that what one of the saxophones had said would be what people and the media talk about. The one you expect to hear the one everyone is repeating and since everyone has been programmed to group think everyone declares this answer as correct. Miles is masterful in this piece because through the composition one can see that the saxophones essentially repeat the same argument, they must, they are essentially the same instrument, and they simply play at differing pitches The trumpet played by Miles himself is less talked about, yet as understood by those who really understand music they know the trumpet carried the day. Miles Davis the trumpet player composed the song, what is the likelihood, that he composed the song in such a way that the trumpet was somehow off key.

I came here after law school, and after which I mopped floors in Starbucks while working to help the homeless men of Detroit, I grew up on the eastside of Detroit under pretty serious poverty and hard circumstances. It taught me real humility, not the sort of humility that people refer to when they accept an award and say I'm truly humbled. Coming from nothing proved to me that God's grace is sufficient.

I ran into Sam Riddle at the gym when he first got out. He told me I've been following what you've been doing, the stuff is brilliant you're pretty smart, you have to be careful though in politics because doing that will mean that at times you'll find yourself too far out in front, like in front of the people. They won't always understand what you are doing and folks will work that against you. I attempted to orchestrate a filibuster on the emergency manager stuff, which the Dems themselves because of inside politics blocked, and blew the opportunity, a year after I had initially proposed the filibuster, that Kate Segal called a nuclear option, the Dems tried to run the play, I saw it on Rachel Maddow, they didn't run the play right. Poor leadership, and lack of skill; I just chuckled; an entire year to catch up, and you blow the play. When I left the Dems caucus more than a year back people called that crazy I said the party is erroneously moving away from its core at the urban center, has no real agenda for African American and minorities, that is a priority as shown by committees and appointments. Detroit one of the highest taxed places to live in the country, has no representation on tax policy, where there are no people of color there either, go figure, I'm sick of high taxes, we will see if Brian Banks can get Tim to correct that intentional mishap. Oh yeah, I digress, so I left the Dem caucus about two years back, this year 30 African American officials left the Dem caucus to form their own caucus in Missouri, that has a democratic governor, over the same arguments and issues I have been talking about. I've worked with them on some issues, they backed a republican for county exec in a Dem county, he lost by 2000 votes, a libertarian candidate ended up taking 7,000 votes, away from him, they almost made the difference. The democratic governor is still pressing in the same direction, hard on hearing. I can admit when I'm wrong though, without going to deep into it, I was wrong on some things as it pertained to the governor. I can understand now some of what he is trying to accomplish. I appreciated the fact that the emergency manager that he did appoint in Detroit was not of the same brand of local yokels that have been hanging around before; I think he did a fine Job handling the bankruptcy. Shout out to rick, the governor re—elect. As I move into the rest of my speech and shout people out, I would take the time to note, that Rick did not start the idea of shouting people out, I'll give him credit for trying to re-invent the shout out, for the rest of y'all, but we've been shouting out for a while now, and never really stopped where I'm from.

I was proud to be apart of the Detroit package, and closely involved in the negotiations, some people didn't want me to be a part of that but God saw to it that my name is crystalized in history as someone who made a difference at a time when Detroit needed it most. And he worked through the Governor, Sally Durfee, the Speaker, and Speaker Pro-tem John Walsh special shout out to John and Sally on that one.

Shout out to Uncle Clemenza, I sat between he and Barb Byrum when I first came, I was intended to sit near the leadership, it was something that Rep. Womack had engineered and actually pulled it off, some of us had hit it off early and he wanted us all to sit near to where the influence would be. Shanelle Jackson in a random move grabbed that seat. I was supposed to sit with Harvey Santana. From seat 100 I would still impose an influence on the left side of the isle through various maneuvers and things. Uncle Clemenza always lended perspective, while Barb kept a record of the events and things said, it makes since that she would now be a clerk. We were right across the isle from the republican caucus and I would often speak over Barb to Joe Haav, and Kurt Heise, who at first I think never wanted to be seen in conversation with me. After all he's been trying to get a hold of Detroit's water system since they switched him off simulac as a baby and he first tasted that fine DWSD product. He knew right then that he had just had to have it. Back then Ellen Lipton flanked my back right, we were fast hard friends still one of the only ones I would say I had while up here, that's pretty deep huh, it's amazing what this process will reveal to you. Still one of the smartest on the floor she definitely gets it, but getting it doesn't always mean you do what is just and righteous with it.

My first term can be characterized by just saying I threw a series of right hand hay— makers not many could handle. I even threw a couple at the speaker I think of anyone he handle them. I guess that is the cloth that showed why he is the speaker. Rick Hammel, Woodrow Stanley, Kate Segal, everyone hoped the haymakers would stop and that Womack would definitely be the one to do it, nearly the entire democratic establishment surely thought so, and they were wrong for like the millionth time. I never hit Womack with a haymaker however, I jabbed him. And to many peoples dismay I came back for a second term – to caucus with the Dems, which didn't last long.

A lot of the stuff I did or said took courage, calling for investigations that, resulted in convictions and such, that sort of thing, when I came here I thought the place would be full of it, that was just a theory, in truth this place is dominated by fear, and I wanted no part of it. I've been knowing the 23rd Psalm my whole life, it all the sudden became real to me once elected, I prayed it so many times, the Lord is my shepherd I shall not want, He makes me to lie down in green pastures He leads me besides the still waters He restores my soul. He leads me down the path of righteousness for His name's sake. Ye though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil for You are with me Thy rod and staff they comfort me You prepare the table before me in the presence of my enemies You anoint my head with oil my cup runs over. Surely goodness and mercy will follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever. I think God equipped me with a mechanism; I've seen it in my mother and my great uncle James Bevel, a well-known civil rights leader, in the day when folks were getting lynched and beaten and jailed not like today where they get their on TV shows. This mechanism, built in never allows any circumstance to faze that's like a word often used in the hood, for ones stolid demeanor. Its synonyms with, deter daunt intimidate discourage upset shock or throw or confuse, I see all things working together for good no matter how others perceive it, it's an unshakeable faith that God will prevail, and so will those who love him.

I'll parenthetically insert the vow of silence I took which was in 2012 around this time. Shaved my head bald, stopped talking, I figured why should I; people seldom change each other's minds up here through talking. One of the photos that survived that move was of me, standing at the desk of the speaker. We were passing notes, it was either he or someone else, but I remember writing, it's okay, I'm only keeping silent, you can talk. That was the beginning of what I would say was one of the more fun and fulfilling friendships and relationships I've had while up here. My bad on that news reporter thing, thanks for holding me down, Jase, p.o.p. The speaker actually wanted to understand what I was trying to get at. He did understand it, it think, and once we came back after the break for the new session we've been making it clear ever since, Thanks for coming down to our city to the hood with big Harv. And for trying to push affordable insurance, making another appearance in the D. And proving, there is always room for intelligent people to reason and work together. I once told the speaker, the same thing I told the democratic leader. When he asked me what are you trying to accomplish and how can I help you, I said I have a few things, but the specifics are really insignificant, all I require is room to operate, I think speaker Jb – understood as a leader what that means, I don't think Tim did or does, shot out to the black hand of politics, speaker James Bolger.

He helped me make a lot of first while here. Embracing my idea of independence, ratifying Joe Haav's, decision to make me chairman on appropriations sub-committee, there were a lot of sour faces on that one, commentary etc. It's where Brandon Dillon showed his true colors, we were friends just for the sake of telling good jokes. He was pissed I became chair. I know folks worked hard to marginalize the fact, but I take that as part of the process, Brandon said, but you never met, my response was, I never needed too, but the next person that comes after me who becomes chair by virtue of doing what they need to do to put their constituency in position will, this is just a start. Besides Brandon, I came here and served as chairman, you came here, and you will leave, even though you'll have three terms, and you will never be able to say that. And it's pretty much your fault since, you led the campaign team. Shot out to Joe Haav, he's huge, I told him that I was the gap between Banana Republic and Old Navy and he took that and made something of it.

This time for session Marcia Wright screwed me out of my seat selection. I forget where I was at first but ended right back in the same spot as before in the proximity of Kurt Heise. A few others stepped up to the plate and bit the bullet for the many folks that didn't want to sit next to me. They will never forgive me if I don't tell you all quick story like a joke, I think we have time for a little story like a joke, I mean I've heard they agreed not to gavel people and give them all the time they needed for these farewells. I was thinking about speaking until January first and getting grandfathered into the next session, making history again, 111 members. So any ways, there is the black man, white woman, Puerto Rican man, and they are all sitting around this house, chilling, digging the scene, in walks an Indian man, middle eastern Indian, not like indigenous people Indian. Like curry and tandoori, not like trail of tears. He walks in, and the three, black, white and Puerto Rican were talking basketball, like old school basketball, the Puerto Rican says to the black guy, you remember the finger roll, like you know when Kareem Abdul Jabbar used to get up like he was going to dunk and then he would just lay the ball in there, it was like a move that showed that he could finesse it. The black guy responds, you're asking me if I remember the finger roll? My uncle on my momma side, brothers, cousin helped Kareem to invent the finger roll they used to hoop over on the eastside of Detroit in the old black bottom. The Puerto Rican laughed the white women who was actually around back then, and spent time in that area doing criminal defense work came to the black man's aid, no, he's telling the truth I was around back then, they invented the finger roll, as a finesse move in black bottom, it was intended to show that the black man, who could easily dunk and score on anyone, could switch it up and finger roll if necessary. The Indian guy sits down he's like, what are you guys talking about, the Puerto Rican says you wouldn't understand, plus its probably something you're better off not hearing about. The black testing the limits says, no he can hear about it, and tell him they are talking about the finger roll that his cousin on his daddy's momma's side invented with Kareem back in the day, the Indian looked puzzled, He said wait, what is a cousin's, daddy's baby momma, the black guy says I didn't say that I said nephew's, cousin's, niece's father. But that's neither here nor there. The white women jumps in and says het black man if you know so such about the finger roll maybe you can teach it to this Indian, the Puerto Rican says no way he can teach that to an Indian, their fingers are too short. The black guy says I can teach it to him lets make a wager, between us all, that I can do it. But I'll need a little but of that Puerto Rican help and translation since I mean you guys both speak the romance languages. And I'm of Nigerian Igbo descent. Time went by and under the black mans tutelage the Indian learned a number of things. And then they took a long break in communication and they all came back together, the white woman asked, did he learn how to finger roll, the black man said, don't ask me ask the Indian or the Puerto Rican, the Puerto Rican says I think we taught him, the white woman says how, it was impossible, the Indian looked up with a smile and said, you know I'm going to be the next floor leader right. They all busted out laughing symbolically finger rolling, to commiserate the event, the white woman asked but wait what did you guys exchange on the wager, she asked the Puerto Rican and the black man, they answered her, respect. Shout out to Big Harv, Sam Singh and Rose Mary. I had fun, Big Harv we've had some on's and off's, but I really respect you bro.

Sitting next to Kurt was different this time, I think we hit it off, we've had a great time he and I and Hooker, this situation is best summed up with an inside joke, in your neighborhood you may be used to brown squirrels, and its always surprising and even confusing the first time someone mentions a black squirrel sighting. But after the initial shock and confusion of you can move past the fact of new squirrels coming to town, it can be quite amusing to watch the more aggressive black squirrels chase around the other squirrels, and even some house cats, and at times stare down a dog. Shot out to Kurt and Hook.

The Black race is under pressure, and I see it as one of my convictions to relieve that pressure. Our numbers on everything that is harmful to people are very high. I was seriously discouraged the other day when a profound thought crossed my mind, it's going to be very hard for us as a people to rebound, I mean close to impossible, and that's why I pray a lot, anytime that some many peoples wellbeing is tied to your misery, you'll find that it's hard to get up, many people have a vested interest in you not standing on your own two feet. Social Worker, for instance, a fairly new occupation, I mean it wasn't around when people had occupations like carpenter, or farmer. In all the Detroit schools we have hired 3 or four social workers, they get paid to help black kids through there miserable circumstance. I've seen kids placed in learning disabled, and have IEPs that were perfectly normal. Sometimes it's like if Jerome isn't good in math or reading, then he must be retarded he can't be good at anything else. Oh my bad we pass a law banning that word. Was I here to vote on that? I look at the police force in Detroit, everyone is like we need more police, police jobs for anyone who wants one in Detroit, and black misery again gives way to more job prospects. We don't need police, we need God, a renewed faith and re-uniting with him is the only force capable of stabilizing our community. We don't have any teachers in Detroit, they all commute from elsewhere. Asian's and Chaldeans should have a black misery appreciation day, they are selling fake hair, gas, and loose cigarettes to people all across Detroit that are hoping to catch a breath of fresh air. And making a fortune doing it. Fred Durhal, once argued against the closing of prison in Detroit, I wasn't in disagreement with him per say, but his main argument was that the closing of the prison meant the loss of Jobs. I mean I hope you get the point. And that paternal attitude of the Democratic Party, and the conjured up pity on behalf of everyone isn't helping. I'm sure you care so much about the poor little black kids that you have to counsel and get paid 50k a year to do that. If that kid wasn't poor anymore, where else would you get paid 50k for coddling, I mean seriously, all the social workers and folks getting grant money to help in Detroit, and I haven't seen any positive change. I'm glad that people receiving welfare from the state will be tested for drugs, I'm glad that welfare is now attached to student attendance, a bill that I introduced as a freshman legislator, and I'm glad that cash benefits are limited to four years. Grand ole party, Good on principles, GOP, keep going, you freed the slaves once, and you'll do it again. Force us to drive these paid well-wishers from our communities, under the guise of the name democrat, it's just so crazy how so many people want to come to our community to help young little black boys, we love so much and care about, but when one comes from that community who took the time out to be educated, gets a law degree and comes to Lansing to deal at arm's length with you, to tell you about, and negotiate for the things that his community needs he can't be heard, you marginalize him, because you know best what his folks need. Keep your pity, give us the respect. It's like the kids used to say in the neighborhoods we grew up in, your not my momma or my daddy. What happened to all the love for the little black boy he can't be heard when he earns a place across the table from you. Many nowadays hate to hear the name of God or see someone pray but love to see a homosexual black male sitting in their offices, so that they can help him. The experiment for exchanging Sigmund Freud for God in the black community has failed. Now everyone wants to help by punishing everyone who doesn't agree with folk's choice to be gay. To me seeing a guy dressed up as a girl is either going to be really funny or really sad? But I mean let's make the observation and move on, but don't offend me by comparing his journey to where panty hose to work because he feels more secure in them to Martin Luther King being assassinated or to my wife's father being sprayed with hoses or bitten by dogs, or to my great uncles being jailed multiple times. Or to millions of people losing their lives to forced bondage and servitude. I'm exercising my right to freedom of speech btw, which is paramount; so don't even think about blowing up my twitter, which I don't check anyway.

I want the GOP to stick to principles, and I want African Americans to get back to our principles of once being an honorable and spiritual people, who wanted most to be right in front of God. When we have him we won't need the Chaldean to sell us loose cigarettes or the Korean to sell us weave or the media and Hollywood and the music industry to sell us toxic rap music. I don't digress, this is what I believe I came here for to make these things known and to begin working on these issues, and I am not going to stop.

Shout out to Fred Durhal, when he gave his speech he cried, I really couldn't hear everything he was saying, and at first I was very cynical about that fact, that he was crying, then I thought about it, Fred is the Black dean of the legislature, that means something, my father never cried much when he was younger, in fact I never saw him cry even once, but I've seen him cry quite a few times in his old age. I think Fred is Old enough and wise enough to understand that time is so limited when it comes to trying to make a difference in this world that is so big. Older men cry in wisdom. It's why I've brought my father here today and my wife. So you can see what holds me together, and also as proof to you that I have no intentions of throwing in the towel, I'm too young. Sam Singh asked me, what am I going to do now, am I going to be okay sort of, I sensed a little cynicism coming from him, he was saying, really, how I took a lot of votes that from his perspective were wrong and I lost an election because of it, now it's like my career is over early, Woodrow Stanley pretty much told me the same thing when I was new here, he told me the short raunchy story about the old bull and the young bull and the cows, and stuff, ended it by saying, all I'm saying John is that you don't want to crash and burn fast so keep that in mind. The illogical and erroneous things that people told me while I was here, one politician told me when I first came words that he lived by while he has been here, I guess he thought its sounds smart, he said someone told me if you came in here and you leave the same way without changing then you did it right. He said that that's how he approached this process, I'm thinking to myself what type of ignorance is that. You mean you come to a place like this with a wealth of knowledge at your disposal, to the seat of decision making in this state, and you say that you don't change at all, that means you don't grow? My response is thanks but no thanks, I'll keep pressing forward with all deliberate speed, down the hill or rather up, and as you all can see by the tight fit of this Brooks Brothers suit, I have no problem growing, and changing. Getting back to Sam, my response to Sam was, since I perceived he wasn't coming from the best place, Sam you don't need to worry about what I do next, it'll be something, indeed something worth talking about, the same as what I've done while I was here, a number of things I've done have kept the place buzzing, made history in a few instances. And further more, I came here at 29, I'm leaving here at 33, I sat in this house prior to you sitting in this house, so by many counts, something I've been doing got me here quite a bit faster than you after all your at least ten years older than me. And now I'm leaving and you're still here, what's the likelihood that I'm going to somehow change what I've been doing that has taken me to places where people have told me since I was a poor boy on the eastside of Detroit that I will never get to, I'm going to take the same advice I gave to the GOP, I'm going to keep going. Shout out to my dad who personally invested himself in my mother and me and sisters, who couldn't be here. Shout out to my wife, look at her, she's the one who tells me to keep going who prays for me and strengthens me, she's an animal, she's tenacious, but loving and gentle and understanding, for most men in here, if a woman such as my wife told you to keep going. What's the likelihood that you are going to stop? It's because I love God and I love my wife, and I love my four children, who have to live in this society, that I am going to keep going. I am grateful to God for the time he had me spend here but now it's time for me to go.

Miles Davis and his masterpiece, helps me to understand a lot of what happens in our society. Propaganda, pushing certain views to the front, lifting certain people up to the top, because they carry the sexiness of the alto or tenor sax, push other views no matter how correct to the side. Miles was expressing this in all blues; he understood that although one maybe correct within the discourse that does not mean that his opinion will be heard or carry the day, especially if there is an overarching counter agenda. I guess that's why he called it the blues, all blues, it can be discouraging. What I like about Miles though, it that he never let that get him down, you see Miles would frequently play the horn with his back to the crowd, he was fulfilling his purpose in God when he played, when he registered his opinion, the rest of us never really care what the crowds thinks, we aren't playing for your applause. The applause of the crowd here on earth. Some of you all should try it sometime it's called courage. Those of us with it are playing for a different reason. For me it is a reason that is as simple as fulfilling ones purpose under God, so that one day he can say well done. God bless us all."
