Michigan Republicans pay $74,000, but for what?

Continues from A1

Moss co-founded the ultraconservative group Ottawa Impact, which makes up the majority of the Ottawa County Board of Commissioners. He did not respond to a request for comment.

According to its website, For Liberty provides “technology solutions and consulting services.” The Detroit News said the business was paid $74,261 by the state GOP on March 31, 41 days after Moss nominated Karamo, who was successfully voted in as chair of the state party.

While the state party did not disclose what the March 31 payment was for, it did disclose the reasons for two further payments to For Liberty. According to the Detroit News, the state GOP paid For Liberty $1,744 on May 17 and $12,551 on June 21 for “digital management.”

Ottawa Impact campaigned last year on cultural issues and state and county pandemic restrictions and won big, ousting a majority of the county commission’s incumbents during the Republican primaries.

Since taking power in January, the group has made a host of controversial changes to the way the county does business, including closing the county’s diversity office, effectively banning county employees from offering services at Pride festivals and threatening to withhold a sizable amount of funding from the county’s health department.

According to Ottawa County campaign finance records, the Ottawa Impact Political Action Committee paid a total of $13,718.99 to For Liberty in the 2022 election cycle for bookkeeping, website and email, web hosting, phone service and data management.

In addition to being leader of Ottawa Impact, Moss is also treasurer of the group’s political action committee.

Liberal advocacy group Progress Michigan said the payment by the state GOP to For Liberty raises concerns about transparency.

“While it is well-established that Kristina Karamo and Joe Moss are more concerned with their extremist agendas than actually serving the people of Michigan, today’s news makes it clear there may be another motive: lining their own pockets,” Progress Michigan Managing Director Denzel McCampbell said. “While Karamo has been making headlines for her failure to fundraise for the party, Moss is raking in loads of cash, and there is no transparency in regards to what the payment was for.”

ENVIRONMENT

Focus on recycling

Continues from A1

Among the legislation passed in the final hours of last year’s lame duck legislative session was the overhaul of Part 115 of the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Act.

The changes would divert more recyclable material from landfills and develop advances in recycling and composting opportunities. Gov. Gretchen Whitmer signed the new law in late December.

Expectations are that recycling in Michigan could more than double under the new law. Boosting recycling rates is part of Whitmer’s climate action plan for the state.

Michigan’s statewide recycling rate lagged the nation at 19% in 2019 but is now about 21%. The national average is 34%.

State environmental regulators say they intend to officially call for new materials management plans this month, which are required for each Michigan county under the new law.

Counties will have three years to create a plan and put it in action. Grant money will be available to help counties take inventory of their waste stream and plan how to boost recycling access for their residents, whether through curbside services, drop-off centers or periodic community events for recycling and hazardous materials collection.

“It’s what is being generated in your county, and what do you have available now to deal with it?” said Liz Browne, materials management division director for the Michigan Department of Environment, Great Lakes and Energy. “And unlike the landfill mandate, it doesn’t say you have to account for every ounce of material that’s being generated. It’s being used more to generate the best data possible to help counties figure out what additional resources they may need.”

Once the state agency calls for county plans, each county government will have 180 days to notify EGLE whether officials intend to develop such a plan for their waste stream. The new law has specific benchmarks that counties will be required to meet.

“We’re all working toward recycling at least 45% of our materials. We’re all also working toward benchmark recycling standards. And these benchmark recycling standards are really where the rubber meets the road, because how do you increase recycling without having recycling opportunities available?” O’Brien said.

A view of milk containers inside the Emmet County Department of Public Works located at 7363 Pleasantview Lane in Harbor Springs in 2022. Kaytie Boomer, MLive.com

If county officials don’t do the waste stream planning work, local municipalities or regional groups will have a chance to take on the task. And if that doesn’t happen, state regulators will write the new plan for them.

“And we purposely devised the department-written plan to be very ugly, because we don’t want to write the plans. We want the plans to be county-generated,” Browne said.

Each county will receive $60,000 annually to write the plan, plus an extra $10,000 for each county that participates in a regional planning group. Additionally, counties will receive an extra 5 cents per capita, up to $300,000, for the first three years.

The new law includes more than just recycling rules. Among the other changes are an increase to landfill surety bonds to prevent costly environmental cleanups from becoming taxpayer problems.

The law also established standards for landfill gas controls and changes to expected landfill closure schedules to a case-by-case basis. Additionally, local officials gained more controls over the aesthetics and hours of operation at landfills, recycling and compost facilities.

More details about the regulation changes can be learned at a series of regional meetings hosted by the Michigan Recycling Coalition. Four of the meetings already happened, and four more are scheduled in October: Oct. 12 in Bay City, Oct. 19 in Petoskey, Oct. 20 in Escanaba, and Oct. 30 in Wayne County.

Finally, EGLE will host a virtual meeting about the planning process on Oct. 18.

Man charged with killing teacher heads to trial

Jordyn Pair jpair@mlive.com

A man charged with killing a Jackson High School teacher will head to trial.

Charles Gamez, 41, was bound over to the Washtenaw County Trial Court on charges of open murder and unlawfully driving away at a hearing on Monday in front of Judge Cedric Simpson. He will next appear before Judge Carol Kuhnke.

Gamez is charged with killing his girlfriend, Alyson Doulos, 48.

Officers from the Washtenaw County Sheriff’s Office were called for a well-being check at Schooner Cove Apartments in the 5000 block of Bosuns Way in Ypsilanti Township on March 13.

After attempting to locate Doulos, officers gained entry into the apartment, where they found her dead. An autopsy ruled Doulos died by strangulation.

Detectives said they believe Doulos died the evening of March 11, the last time phone records show Doulos and Gamez together, according to transcripts of the swear-to hearing obtained by MLive.

“There was a significant amount of blood and trauma to Alyson’s face and head,” Washtenaw County Sheriff’s Office Det. Heather Morrison said during a hearing requesting a warrant for Gamez. “Alyson had appeared to have been assaulted in the hallway of the apartment, and then (dragged) to the living room, where she came to final rest.”

Prosecutors also claim Gamez stabbed Doulos in the face.

“(He) took a knife to her face so hard that part of the knife actually broke off in her jawbone and is embedded in her jaw-bone,” Assistant Washtenaw County Prosecutor Jessica Blanch said at Gamez’s arraignment.

Neighbors saw Gamez leave with two dogs that lived in the apartment around 7 p.m. March 11, Morrison said.

“And at that time, he fled to his mother’s house, and then to other family members,” Morrison said.

Gamez had a history of domestic violence and had spent time in prison for several felonies, according to court records. He was arraigned on charges of open murder and unlawfully driving away a vehicle on March 17 after turning himself into police two days prior.

Doulos taught 10th- and 11th-grade English at Jackson High School since 2020.

She was also the National Honor Society adviser at the school and helped students with after-school tutoring.

Gamez is currently being held without bond in the Washtenaw County Jail. If convicted, he faces a maximum sentence of life in prison. He is next set to appear in court Nov. 14.

The Department of Natural Resources will hold a public hearing to receive public comments on proposed changes to the State Land Use Rules rule set.

State Land Use Rules list various unlawful acts for individuals who use or occupy lands under the control of the department. The rules also provide certain exemptions, penalty for violation of rules, and enforcement authorities. The proposed amendment will provide clarity and consistency to the provisions in R 299.924 and R 299.927 related to the leash requirement for certain dogs, bring the rule into alignment with the original intent of the rule, and reduce confusion for land users and enforcement personnel.

By authority conferred on the Department of Natural Resources by section 504 of the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Act, Public Act 451 of 1994, MCL 324.504, and Executive Reorganization Orders Nos. 1991-22, 2009-3145, and 2011-1, MCL 299.13, 324.99919, and 324.99921.

The proposed rules will take effect immediately after filing with the Secretary of State. The proposed rules are published on the State of Michigan’s website at www.michigan.gov/ARD and in the 10/15/2023 issue of the Michigan Register. Copies of these proposed rules may also be obtained by mail or electronic mail at the following email address: rostm@michigan.gov.

CHOOSING THE BEST BRUSH

With so many options available, choosing the right toothbrush for your specific needs can be daunting. Follow these easy guidelines to pick the best brush. Consider the size of the brush head: the best size for most adults is one that’s one inch long and half an inch wide. Choose a brush with good grip for better control. Bristles come in soft, medium, and hard; for most people, soft bristles are the safest choice. Straight bristles can do more harm than good, so always go for rounded bristles. Most importantly, choose a brush that’s ADA or CDA approved—this ensures that the bristles are safe and secured, the handle is sturdy, and the brush helps reduce plaque and gum disease.

P.S. Both manual and electric toothbrushes do a sufficient job, as long as you brush for the recommended two minutes and use the correct technique.

lead Chris Guibert.

“When doing this, you kind of become an advocate for dark skies, and really once you learn about it, it’s hard to not become one,” Guibert said.

“The point that resonated most with me is up until 100 years ago, the world operated in total darkness at night. There’s a lot of things being affected besides humans,” he said.

Adams said the same. “Is electric light always the last light I see before I close my eyes and go to bed? And does that matter?” she said.

In 2011 Headlands was the ninth in the world to be recognized internationally.

The park’s experience has influenced successful efforts to protect over 35,000 acres of state-owned land and dark skies, according to its website.

Although there are no state laws specifically intended to reduce light pollution, state parks are required to point down and shield their outdoor lighting.

According to the University of Michigan, light pollution is increasing globally at a rate of 10 percent every year.

However, light pollution is 100 percent reversible — by turning off lights, reworking the shape of an outdoor light or changing the hue.

Adams, who was the Headlands program manager for eight years, helped the park earn international certification.

“I got on the agenda for the Emmet County Board of Commissioners. I told them, ‘You have a park, it’s naturally dark, we can get it protected and we have to get ready because people will come from around the world to come see it.’”

“They laughed at me,” Adams said. “My experience is that people really want this kind of relationship because they experience a fundamental disconnect in contemporary culture,” she said.

Headlands park manager Jamie Westfall said tourism has been booming with thousands of people showing up on one clear night.

“We’re lucky that we live in an area where the skies are still fairly dark. People travel here to see the features in the night sky that they can’t see in their home area — they don’t get to see the Milky Way, northern lights, constellations or features in the moon,” she said.

“They’re special to our region because we still have dark skies,” Westfall said.

not involved in the EPA study.

“Is the winter temperature becoming more tolerable? I think it is,” he said.

Walker also warned that another unwelcome, disease-carrying insect, the lone star tick, has moved northward.

“We now have established populations in Southwest Michigan,” he said. “They have serious implications and add to some of the burdens we already have.”

According to the EPA study, the ranges of both northward-bound species are projected to include the Great Lakes area by 2050, with the Asian tiger extending its range earlier and further.

The study cites a series of adverse impacts due to climate change, including more frequent drought because of decreased snow and ice cover, rising deep water winter temperatures in Lake Michigan and reduced ice cover on Lake Superior. Drought is also associated with epidemics of the West Nile virus.

“In addition, storm surges are likely to become larger, resulting in more microhabitats for mosquito development in cities such as Chicago and Detroit, which are already prone to flooding and standing water,” according to the study in the journal EcoHealth.

The Michigan Department of Health and Human Services collects data on viral infections that are spread to people by the bite of infected insects such as mosquitoes and ticks, including data from testing of mosquito pools. The department also offers advice to the public on how to control mosquitoes inside and outside their homes.

Because yellow fever mosquitoes “live near and prefer to feed on people, they are more likely to spread these viruses than other types of mosquitoes,” the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention says.

The “invasive success” of the yellow fever mosquito is primarily due to international trade and travel, the European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control says.

Department of Natural Resources
Law Enforcement Division
Administrative Rules for State Land Use Rules
Rule Set 2023-6 NR

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
Thursday, October 19, 2023
02:30 PM

Hutchinson Conference Room
Constitution Hall, Atrium Level, 525 West Allegan, Lansing, MI 48933

The Department of Natural Resources will hold a public hearing to receive public comments on proposed changes to the State Land Use Rules rule set.

State Land Use Rules list various unlawful acts for individuals who use or occupy lands under the control of the department. The rules also provide certain exemptions, penalty for violation of rules, and enforcement authorities. The proposed amendment will provide clarity and consistency to the provisions in R 299.924 and R 299.927 related to the leash requirement for certain dogs, bring the rule into alignment with the original intent of the rule, and reduce confusion for land users and enforcement personnel.

By authority conferred on the Department of Natural Resources by section 504 of the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Act, Public Act 451 of 1994, MCL 324.504, and Executive Reorganization Orders Nos. 1991-22, 2009-3145, and 2011-1, MCL 299.13, 324.99919, and 324.99921.

The proposed rules will take effect immediately after filing with the Secretary of State. The proposed rules are published on the State of Michigan’s website at www.michigan.gov/ARD and in the 10/15/2023 issue of the Michigan Register. Copies of these proposed rules may also be obtained by mail or electronic mail at the following email address: rostm@michigan.gov.

Comments on these proposed rules may be made at the hearing, by mail, or by electronic mail at the following addresses until 10/27/2023 at 05:00PM.
