NOTE: It was this convention that formed Michigan's first constitution.

Relying on provisions of the Ordinance of 1787 and the Act of January 11, 1805, 2 Stat. 309, creating the Territory of Michigan, the Legislative Council of the Territory of Michigan enacted legislation providing for the election of delegates to a convention to form a constitution and state government. The act, passed January 26, 1835, defined the time and manner of the election, the number of delegates from each district, and the time and place of the convention. As the Northwest Ordinance had provided that "whenever any of the said states shall have sixty thousand free inhabitants therein . . . [it] shall be at liberty to form a permanent Constitution and State government," the act also declared Michigan's population to be 87,273, the result of a census the council had authorized September 6, 1834.

Delegates to this convention were elected April 4, 1835, and convened in Detroit, then the capital of the territory, on May 11, 1835. The delegates adopted the constitution on June 24, 1835, for submission to a vote of the people. On October 5 and 6 of that year, the people approved the constitution by a vote of 6,299 to 1,359. This vote total, which was printed in the Journal of the Senate (November 3, 1836), did not include vote totals from Kalamazoo County. That vote, 453 in favor and 15 against, appears in the Record of Elections 1835-1845, Office of the Secretary of State.

¹ The vote for Davis and Rexford was a tie. The convention passed a resolution sending the matter back to the district for a special election, which was held on May 25, 1835. Both delegates were permitted to hold seats with the privilege of debating but not voting issues until the election returns were received. Rexford won the election and was seated by the convention on June 3, 1835.

² A credentials check led to the seating of Tiffany on May 16, 1835. Whitney served until that date.

NOTE: Arguing that the 1850 constitution "is defective in many respects, and needs to be amended to conform to the growth and development of the State," the legislature approved Joint Resolution No. 19, on April 24, 1873, providing for the governor to appoint a commission to report "such amendments and revision of the constitution . . . [as] may be necessary for the best interests of the State and the people."¹

Under the terms of the resolution, the governor appointed an 18-member commission, 2 members from each of the state's 9 congressional districts, to consider amending or revising the Constitution of 1850. The commission convened at Lansing on August 27, 1873, adjourned on October 16 after completing its work, and reported to the governor on December 1 that the "work of the commission . . . has been equivalent to a revision, although it is technically recognized in the official records of the commission as the amended constitution"

Calling a special session of the legislature in 1874, the governor submitted the commission's report and suggested amendments to the legislature as required by Joint Resolution No. 19. After studying the most advisable method of submitting the proposed amendments to the constitution to a vote, the legislature further amended the commission's proposals. On March 26, 1874, it approved Joint Resolution No. 4, proposing amendments to the Constitution of 1850.

At the election of November 3, 1874, the people rejected the proposed constitution by a vote of 39,285 for to 124,034 against.

¹Appointed October 2, 1873.

²Granted an indefinite leave of absence September 23, 1873; resigned October 8, 1873.

NOTE: Under the provisions of Const. 1850, art. 20, §2, ninety-six delegates, three from each of the 32 senatorial districts established by Act 264 of 1895 and elected according to the provisions of Act 272 of 1907, convened in Lansing on October 22, 1907. The convention adopted the proposed revision of the constitution February 21, 1908, and adjourned March 3, 1908.

By Act 272 of 1907, the legislature had required the revised constitution be submitted to the people for a vote at the April 1908 election. The convention, however, due to the length of its deliberations (they did not end until February 21), voted to submit the constitution to a vote at the November general election. The secretary of state, doubting the power of the convention to fix a date other than that provided by the legislature, refused to comply with the order of the convention.

In Garton v. Secretary of State, 151 Mich. 337; 115 N.W. 429 (1908), the Michigan Supreme Court held that in the absence of an express grant of power to the legislature and by the implications drawn from Const. 1850, art. 20, §§1 and 2, the convention did have the power to set the date for submission of the constitution to a vote. Therefore, by order of the Supreme Court, the people voted on November 3, 1908; the revised constitution was adopted by a vote of 244,705 for to 150,783 against.

² Appointed November 27, 1907, to replace Roswell P. Bishop.

NOTE: Under the provisions of Const. 1908, art. 17, §4, the call for a constitutional convention was submitted to a vote at the general election held November 4, 1958. The proposal was defeated, as it did not earn a majority of the total vote cast.

On November 8, 1960, voters approved an initiative proposal to amend Const. 1908, art. 17, §4, to permit the submission of the question of a general revision of the constitution at the spring election of 1961 and in every sixteenth year thereafter. At the election held on April 3, 1961, voters approved a constitutional convention to revise the Constitution of 1908.

One hundred forty-four delegates were elected under the provisions of Act 125 of 1960, as amended by Act 8 of 1961 and Act 230 of 1961. The delegates represented each of the 110 house of representatives districts and the 32 senate districts. The members convened in Lansing on October 3, 1961, and adopted the proposed constitution on August 1, 1962, by a vote of 98-43. Ninety-three Republicans and 5 Democrats voted for adoption, and 40 Democrats, joined by 3 Republicans, voted against the revision. Voters adopted the constitution on April 1, 1963, by a vote of 810,860 for to 803,436 against.
